The truth has finally come out

I have a confession to make. I lied about my house burning down.

I lied in order to gain sympathy from my ex-girlfriend. I thought that if she felt enough pity for me in my time of tragedy and need, it would help us get back together. I mean, who wouldn't want me. Just look at this suave photo of me.

Tryg, enough about the photo, how do you expect anyone to believe anything you say from now on?

Well, my lying just shows how much I wanted to get my girlfriend back. Let the people believe what they want. I know what the truth is. Sometimes you just gotta hurt the ones you love in order to make things better.

What the hell does that mean? Are you some sort of sadist?

No, I just read that in one of my philosophy classes.

Anyway back to my house. When my grandmother read the column about my house burning to the ground, she gave me a huge guilt trip about lying, so I decided to come clean in order to assuage my conscience.

Actually, she said that she would burn the house down herself unless I told you the truth. Damn woman. That's the last time I call her at the old folk's home.

My girlfriend was not impressed with my little charade, though. She destroyed my triple-edged underwater plane saw in order to get back at me. What's a guy to do with out his underwater plane saw?

Tryg, just what is a guy supposed to do?

Ha! Ha! You're so funny. You should be writing this instead of me, oh great, all-knowing editor. You think it's easy trying to be funny each week while at the same time juggling around schoolwork, my role as a campus leader and my PlayStation. It's not as easy as it looks, Einstein.

On another note, has anyone noticed the weather this weekend? I enjoyed walking down to the Mall and watching all the GW girls strutting their stuff. Nothing like little, tight black outfits in 80-degree weather to show off little, tight white asses. Wish we had some Commencement subject, have they picked a speaker yet? Although I shall be graduating, I am still very much available to speak to my fellow graduates.

Why do you think anyone would want to hear you speak when they can read your column each week?

Listen wise guy, one more outburst from you, and you're going to have to go to that pansy "I-was-a-paid-intern-so-therefore-I'm-a-cool" guy and ask him, no make that, beg him, to come write for you. After all, when his rag, "Yo, Testes!" folds, he'll have plenty of time to spare.

So like most seniors, I'm trying to figure out what to do after graduation. I have come to a conclusion - I have no idea what I am going to do. What kind of job can I get that will pay well, yet help me attain true happiness? I just don't know? I wonder if I can keep writing this column post-graduation?

No.

Shoot. Maybe I can become a TV sports commentator. That would be neat. Then I could play with one of those pens that lets me draw the plays on viewers' screens. I could write funny messages and no one would be able to stop me. Ah, the power I have always longed for!

Tryg, you have to get a grip. You're not going to get any sort of decent job - you're a philosophy major for Christ's sake!

Dammit, if I can't be a sports commentator, then I'll just go around the country and be a leader whenever a leader is needed. That is my calling in life. I have found my destiny! Whenever there is suffering, injustice or liberty is threatened, and a leader is needed, I'll be there.

Tryg

more of that kind of stuff back in Minnesota. That would be a lot more fun than going ice fishing with neighbors.

I am beginning to think that moving Commencement to the Ellipse was a bad idea. It is going to be so damn hot. Especially with that damn El Niño and all.

But don't fear, I have a plan. I have hired the now-jobless Rat-trick McAnus to persuade the administration to move the ceremony back to the MCI Center. I am even thinking about writing another open letter to SJT about heat stroke.

Please Tryg, no more open letters. There is only so much that the GW community can take in a year.

Important event happens at GW

by Beggin Tobenext
Faced Heavy Competition

Something happened on campus today, according to people who were there.

"Something happened," one source said.

"Uh, yeah," another source said. "It was something big."

No one at the scene could confirm exactly what happened, but one University administrator, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said he expects the event will both cost a lot of money and screw students.

"I can guarantee you that whatever it was, students won't like it," the administrator said. "In fact, I think it will probably generate a lot of stories and opinion pieces in campus media."

But although he predicted heated student reaction to the incident, the administrator said he expects GW officials to ignore all student demands that the event be explained. He also said he expects administrators to disregard student requests for more input in similar events in the future.

Student Association President "X" said the organization is mobilizing in an effort to combat the aftermath of today's happenings.

"Whatever happened is a definite blow to students," "X" said. "I will fight with all of the power I have - negligible though it is - to make things right by students."

"We are planning a boycott of the place where the event happened, and we will begin handing out palm cards with the details as soon as we find out what happened," he said.

When asked exactly what happened, "X" said he didn't know, but said the SA will advocate that student leaders meet with GW administrators to find out.

A grassroots student organization, Student Protesters Advocating Your Interests Today (SPAYIT), is forming to ensure that student demands are met if similar circumstances arise again.

Wasted Labor, SPAYIT coordinator and former SA EVP candidate, said he has been unable to confirm what happened today, but he has heard rumors that the event will destroy student life.

"I heard it's bad, very bad," Labor said. "But I'm looking at creating some sort of a discount card so students will feel that even if something like this happens again, they can save money in the process."

GWobe Mad Libs

The University's decision to _____ (verb phrase) is incredibly short-sighted and ill-advised. It is difficult to believe that in this day and age, _____ (administrator's name) still does not understand students here are more than just _____ (noun). We are also _____ (noun). This decision is just further proof we attend a _____ (disparaging adjective) University. It must not come to fruition.

The last time we checked, students paid $_____ (big number) to attend this _____ (numeric tier) school. To make matters worse, the _____ (adjective) service we receive is comparable to a _____ (scary place). How dare _____ (administrator) treat students this way!

Our student leaders bear much of the blame for this _____ (adjective) decision. Their leadership is _____ (adjective) at best, _____ (adjective) at worst. Where were they when we needed them most? If students cannot _____ (verb) their elected leaders, who can they _____ (verb)?

It is time students took decisive action. We must _____ (verb) to fight the _____ (adjective) administration. The best way to vocalize our _____ (noun) is to _____ (verb). This will let the University know we are serious. By _____-ing (verb), we will put an end to the administration's belief that all students are _____ (adjective) _____ (noun).

This University decision is _____ (adverb) ridiculous. We all should sign a _____ (noun) to let the University know this is a campus-wide concern. Imagine what _____ (administrator) will say when he/she sees _____ (number) signatures, most of them actual students here. This is our _____ (noun). It is up to _____ (noun) to _____ (verb) and fight for _____ (noun).

Screw the Ellipse!

We were wrong. Plain and simple. For months we railed against the University's proposal to move Commencement from the Ellipse to the MCI Center. They listened and decided to keep it where it was. But now we realize we made a mistake. Commencement should be held at the MCI Center. It is the best location for our life-long memories to occur.

First, when did the Ellipse become a tradition? It has only been used for the last couple of years. That does not signify an unbreakable tradition. A few years ago when Coke introduced "New Coke," it bombed hard and fast. The public never saw it as a "tradition," but only as the cheap publicity gimmick that it was. Same thing with the Ellipse. Just because Commencement has been out in the open for the past few years does not mean this is a something to hand down from one generation to the next like grandma's silverware.

Second, what's so bad about the MCI Center? It's indoors, next to the Metro, in Chinatown (for diversity awareness fans) and everyone gets a good seat. In contrast, by having the event on the Ellipse, you may be sunburned, drenched or bombarded – not only by the shit speakers are throwing at the audience – but also by pigeons. Imagine finding a parking space at the Ellipse! Do you really want to be walking the streets of D.C. in your new JC Penney attire?

So now we have admitted our mistake in supporting the Ellipse. We were wowed by Ellipse supporters who plied us with alcohol and drugs. That is why we wrote so many editorials supporting the Ellipse. Would any sober person do such a stupid thing? We think not.

We also have a suggestion on how to improve attendance at Commencement, as well as at Monumental Celebration – ask the chicks from Mount Vernon College to don those Playboy bunny outfits serve everyone drinks and snacks. That would definitely arouse interest. And the pay is great. Since they're our bitches now, it's the least we can do.

Bitchings to No One Who Cares

DIKs out in full

We, the brothers of Delta Iota Kappa, would like to express our extreme displeasure with coverage of Tool events by The GWobe. Your piece of ferret turd rag is just showing everybody how much you hate us and will never show us in a good light, no matter what nice things we have to do because of disciplinary probation.

DIK has been in existence for more than 123 years. In that time, our members have distinguished themselves from non-Tools. Many of our brother-masters have led successful and normal lives after having their gonads lit on fire during Tool pledging events. Currently we are searching for a new Shed where all Tools can live together. Due to several sexual assault incidents The GWobe blew completely out of proportion at our previous Shed, our lease was terminated.

Today's Tools are different from the collection of Tools in years past. We have collected 12 cans from each of our pledges which we give to homeless people who live in the area. The GWobe completely ignored this major philanthropic event. But The GWobe has never strayed from hyping up any time our Tools have gone to the hospital to have their stomachs pumped after we poured beer down their throats with a funnel for half an hour.

Why don't you people mind your own business? We are trying to pass on the Tool traditions handed down by our brother-masters to our very own Tool pledges. You people don't understand us. If you ain't ever been to the Tool Shed, don't ever come to the Tool Shed, because you wouldn't understand the Tool Shed, so stay the fuck out of the Tool Shed.

-Al Coholic
DIK head

Actual letter

I am a 36-year-old single college student with no children. This letter addresses the priorities of people seeking education. With the world population moving upward irreversibly, the economic maladjustments and the earth's resources vanishing, I want to state something about "forever."

There is infinite concern for the needs of legal minors and babies in the world's system. Each generation grows mature to do worse behaviors than the previous. Parents and children will rationalize themselves into their own lifestyle leaving no point to responsibility.

We lost this world, and if there is a God, he or she undoubtedly cares for us. He will not fix it because it is not his fault. Temptations are the advice you get from your questions about your problems. This can sound like I don't know what love is. May a person fall in love with someone and help others? Show me the love in this world. I see selfishness.

-Lonely Loony

Oral satisfaction

I am writing to inform the GW community of the area's least-known talent group, the Twitches. We are GW's first, only and best a cappella group comprised entirely of women with Turret's Syndrome.

Because of The GWobe's obvious bias toward us, we never receive publicity for our twice-yearly performances. (Because of the nature of our disease, our members are sometimes wrongly arrested for violating obscenity laws).

Therefore, we must resort to alternative forms of attention-getting. Our new policy is to spice our performances – remember that scene Madonna did with an Evian bottle in Truth or Dare? That's nothing! We'll go much further than that. How far? As far as you want to go, baby!

So please, come out and support the Twitches! Where else can you see sex stuff, outbursts of obscenities and an a cappella concert all in one place?

-Crabby Manturd
Twitch bitch

All dried up

I would just like to thank everyone who came out to support me during my ill-thought-out campaign. While I knew I had no chance in hell of winning, I still went all-out and so did my three supporters. Thanks guys. It is because of tools like you that people like me are not elected.

I represented those at GW that have traditionally been ignored – the fashion disasters, the anorexic, the perpetually tanned, the clueless. Yet I was soundly defeated after mounting a hard-hitting campaign. How was I to know that students wanted more than just vocal rimjobs? Both me and Rat-trick Lickanus thought our campaign of bullshit and bimbos was going to propel us to victory. We had even made reservations at a tanning salon for our victory party!

So now I have no job for next year. If I had been smart, I would never have joined forces with Lickanus and would have stayed friends with Messy Louse. I want to congratulate Louse on his campaign, and let him know that if he needs any gimps, I have a bunch of friends I would highly recommend for the job. Good luck next year, and remember, falling asleep in a tanning bed is not a good idea when running for office.

-Sun-Dried Raisin Flavor
GW has-been

Handful of hurt

I have been severely hurt by this University many times. But this time, they've gone too far. How dare they tell me, a human being, that I am less than everyone else because of who I am! I am a man. Like any man, I have feelings. Why can't people at this University understand this?

Last week, while using the men's bathroom at the Marvin Center, something completely unacceptable occurred.

The bouncer at the third-floor bathroom door let me in without hassle. After putting in a request with the DJ for "Disco Inferno," I went to the Velvet Stall.

When I was done with my business, I reached over for toilet paper. But what I found has caused me many nights of lost sleep. The toilet paper these people – the University – had in the roll was white! How dare the administration use white as the only acceptable toilet paper!

Are we not a rainbow of people, values and diversity? I think so. Are we all white, straight Protestant males at this school? I think not. Then why do we insist on perpetuating the myths of conservative traditionalists by maintaining only white toilet paper? What kind of message are we sending to the children of our nation?

I am demanding that the administration immediately install rainbow-colored toilet paper in every stall on campus. Anyone who disagrees with me is a racist, homophobic, small-minded, Nazi fascist with irregular bowel movements. Furthermore, I am demanding that all bathrooms be equipped with audio equipment that plays Village People and Back Street Boys continuously.

These are not extreme demands, I am just asking for what I think are reasonable requests. The time has come for the hurting to stop at GW. I will not stand for any more hurting to be done to me.

Actual "crazy-man" letters received over the years

Dear Hatchet,

I am successful, professional woman:
I used to be a campus liberal in 1969, but now I'm fashionable and only care about myself and money.

I am so rich and so cool, so into Women's Lib and money and ~~king~~ cigars and safe sex.

I dress in style, have a job ripping off the public, and every time I look in the

Dear Hatchet,

I was in the GWU Class of 1971: The students
then took LSD, dropped out, got arrested, hated America, refused to work, wasted all their college money, lived on junk food, etc.

Nowadays GWU students are serious stuents, study hard, exercise, drink bottled water, etc.

I mean, 1997 yuppie are so righteous to only care about themselves and money and vote for lower taxes while welfare children starve, and work for big rip-off corporations, and vote Republican.

1971 liberals and campus radicals were so had, being for peace in Vietnam and rights for minorities, and more money for the needy and getting away fro worshipping money, and planning to be social workers and teachers and do-gooders....

Class of 1969

Drop it on the Viet Cong!

Dear Sir:

What's so GREAT about PROFESSIONALS?
Somebody who is a corporate lawyer representing big rip off corporations while children starve: why should I respect her?

Dear "Hatchet":

It's too bad about the government shutdown-most wag-b: It'll be a shame if any professional middle class person went hungry.

You know, if you wear a jacket and tie to work, you're automatically a better person.

Dear Sir:

Only middle class professional people matter.

It's no longer fashionable to be a liberal.

Only people who drink bottled water and wear ~~gx~~ joggers shoes and white socks are good persons.

It's okay to do anything for money.

A talk with an old love interest

Okay kiddies, I have given you, my faithful readers, several columns in which I have poured out my heart and soul, recounting a history of my foiled love attempts. This column will be no different, I shall tell you all about yet another relationship that crashed and burned long before it ever took off.

Back in my youthful days in Thrustin' Hell,
I met the most gorgeous girl I have ever had the privilege of laying my eyes on. Her name was Annon. (Doesn't that name just send shivers up your willeys?). She was also a resident of the Hall of Hormones and Horniness. Her beauty was unmatched in all my many years of looking longingly at members of the fairer sex.

During the time that I knew her (actually, I never really knew her, I just sort of always happened to be in the laundry room at the same time she would be there folding her unmentionables), we never spoke more than a few words. Usually it would be something like, "Stop looking at me, loser!" But I knew that in those dismissals of me, there was hope for a meaningful and lasting relationship, just like occurred every Friday and Saturday night in the Halls of Horniness.

In my entire freshman year, the only thing that kept me going late at night when everyone else had long since passed into the REM stage of sleep, was dancing visions of her in my head. This goddess of love was in my mind at all times; it sometimes caused me considerable discomfort and embarrassment when her mental presence was obvious to all around me.

Yet our relationship never really blossomed due to her interest in a member of our esteemed crew team. The thoughts of "him" gripping his long oar, muscles bulging, body all covered in manly sweat while she looked on from the sidelines, made me ache with jealousy. Alas, the months of freshman year zoomed past me like a dress off a drunken sorority girl at a frat party without Annon looking deep into my eyes and telling me her true feelings of love, lust and desire for my wiry body.

It is only now after I have achieved tremendous fame and critical acclaim as the GWobe's controversial columnist that Annon has given me the time of day. I was able to sit down with her and put pen to paper.

Rob: "Why did you never talk to me freshman year?"

Annon: "Because you were a loser."

Rob: "Did you ever think of me in sexual ways?"

Annon: "Ugh, no. Never."

Rob: "Do you approve of lesbian activity?"

Annon: "To each his own."

Rob: "Have you ever been involved in lesbian activity?"

Annon: "No."

Rob: "Is there anything about me that would attract you?"

Annon: "You have a nice aura."

Rob: "Is a man's aura measured in a way similar to other attributes of him?"

Annon: "What are you talking about?"

Rob: "Do you give your breasts names? Like Shelley and Kelly, or Sam and Pam?"

Annon: "You have problems. Why do you keep holding your notebook over your crotch?
Are you... Oh my God! You are a sick, sick little boy! Get the hell away from me before I call the cops!"

This ended my interview with the apple of my eye - Annon. My chances of eloping with this lovely little lass had evaporated faster than our basketball team's tournament aspirations.

Before you go on to the challenging crossword puzzle, I would urge you all to come to the corner of 22 and G streets Monday at 2:30 p.m. to see one of my athletic friends walk around in his tighty-whities. He lost a bet on GW President Testesbulg (circled) enjoys a little more fame for his acting role in John Girsham's The Rainmaker.

Testesbulg debuts as insane drunk

by Hava Rabbit
Artificial Editor

In what GW President Steven Testesbulg said was his acting debut, he admitted last week to playing Buddy Black, the alcoholic father, in John Formulaic Girsham's The Rainmaker.
"It really wasn't that difficult," Testesbulg said of his part. "I just replaced the Hollywood rum with some D.C. 'water' and ran with it."
Students were unaware that the president was pursuing other professions while running the University. "How did he have time?" freshman

Timmy Tehctah asked in a Student Association townhall meeting on the matter.

SA President "P" Gulpalot fielded questions on behalf of Testesbulg. "It really doesn't take that much time," Gulpalot said. "I mean the acting thing."

Gulpalot said Testesbulg enjoyed the change of pace from directing everything to being directed. He added that working with such competent and talented people was a breath of fresh air.

Some students wondered if Buddy Black was, in fact, Testesbulg long before the announcement. Lets B. Frank, a junior communications major, said, "I knew it all along. I know everything about Hollywood - and I knew this."

Other students were amused by the president's new vocation. "It's really not all that new for him," I. M. Green said. "The Adams Hall thing is proof." Green went on to add that Testesbulg should have earned an Oscar for his performance - which one, he did not specify. Testesbulg later sent pizza to Green.

Gulpalot relayed a message from the president about his future in Hollywood. "I don't think I will continue to act," Gulpalot read from a letter, "unless I can have a fairly similar part. My niche seems to be the certifiable alcoholic who sits in the back of a car."

SEX!SEX!SEX!

Hollywood focuses on SEX, not love

Everybody always wants to know who is in love with who in Hollywood. Let's face it, there's no such thing as love in Hollywood. It's pure sex. So let's talk about who is fucking who.

At the premier for the re-release of Grease, Olivia Newton-John and John Travolta couldn't keep their hands off each other. They spontaneously broke into the song "You Are the One I Want" halfway through the movie, creating more action in the theater than on screen.

Another reunited couple from Grease is Stockard Channing and Jeff Conway. When Channing arrived at the opening with Conway on her arm, no one doubted he was responsible for her "bun in the oven."

Speaking of on- and off-screen couples, Julian Moore and Mark Wahlberg from Boogie Nights have made their on-screen romance (okay, their on-screen sex) a real thing. According to Moore's publicist, she wasn't satisfied by anyone after Wahlberg's 14 inches.

Titanic co-stars Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet were seen boarding a boat at Montego Bay. Neither has been seen since.

After revealing a lot about herself at the Oscars (she's really a blond), Ashley Judd called it quits with Michael Bolton. Their short-lived romance is not surprising. Bolton is rumored to be quite the ladies' man.

The stars of "Friends" have really been out of the limelight lately. Well, now some of them are coming out of the closet. David Schwimmer (Ross) and Matt LeBlanc (Joey) surprised everyone when they emerged from the limo holding hands at the release of co-star Jennifer Aniston's latest movie, The Object of my Affection. There's no question who the object of Schwimmer's affection is.

Speaking of out of the closet, The Backstreet Boys are all over the news lately with the success of their single, "Quit Playing Games with My Heart." They have been compared to New Kids on the Block from the 1980s. The two bands are actually closer than anyone thinks.

After the members were spotted together all over Boston, The Backstreet Boys and NKOTB finally admitted they were engaged in a relationship. Apparently, there were quarrels among The Backstreet Boys because they all wanted to date Donny Wahlberg. After seeing Mark Wahlberg in Boogie Nights, they thought Donny must be large, thanks to genetics.

Perhaps the best-kept secret of this year is the budding relationship between President Trachtenberg and Claire Danes. After Danes worked with him on The Rainmaker, she said she couldn't keep him out of her mind. Soon after its release, the two became inseparable. Danes was overheard saying, "There's just so much of him to love."

ARIES (March 22-April 21)

You have been wanting to ask that girl/guy out in your lit class for months. S/he has been feeling the same way and will ask you to out. Who said nice guys always finish last?

TAURUS (April 22- May 21)

All of your hard studying paid off. You have been offered another scholarship because you are so darn smart. Your parents are really proud.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21)

Last week when your friends were giving you a hard time, it was only because they were jealous. Stick with the new guy/girl, and your friends will come around.

CANCER (June 22-July 21)

Your co-workers realized what a valuable asset you are to the workplace. You may even be getting a raise soon.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 21)

Last weekend was full of surprises, and this week is more of the same. Things are going so well for you. Just smile and go with them.

VIRGO (Aug. 22-Sept. 21)

You have been really concerned about where you are going to work this summer. That company that has been giving you the run around will come through.

LIBRA (Sept. 22-Oct. 21)

You made too many commitments and couldn't hold down your job. Don't worry, your parents understand. Definitely check the mail this week.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21)

There is only one word to describe this week for you - amazing. If you go out with your friends Wednesday, you'll meet the guy/girl of your dreams.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

It's time you treat yourself to something. With your wonderful luck, you might end up being the one-millionth customer and receiving a free shopping spree, and no one deserves that as much as you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 21)

You deserve a vacation. Take the weekend off and go somewhere. You have been working so hard lately you don't even need to feel guilty. Just pack up and go.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 22-Feb. 21)

You've been really confused for a while. This week you'll figure everything out. Your intelligence and general concern for others will lead you down the path of righteousness.

PISCES (Feb. 22-March 21)

You don't realize how much people admire you. When someone pays you a compliment, take them seriously. They aren't just trying to get something from you. They genuinely idolize you.

Mariana Velasquez

Grateful J Street employee thanks Trachtenberg for life in the States

Mariana Velasquez (name changed at administration's request) was just 15 years old when her parents' tranquil farm in El Salvador was sacked and burned by guerrilla forces.

Her parents and younger brothers dead, Velasquez sat weeping in the charred ruins.

"I prayed for salvation," she remembers. "And when I looked up, there he was. I have never forgotten the happy gleam in his eyes."

Velasquez's savior in pinstripes was none other than Stephen Joel Trachtenberg.

Trachtenberg had ventured to Central America in search of cheap labor. The idea struck him, he said, after watching a 60 Minutes report on deplorable working conditions of migrant farm workers.

"I thought to myself, 'If Californians can do it, so can we,'" Trachtenberg chuckled. "We at George Washington try to think progressively."

Although he usually avoids venturing beyond the grounds of his palatial residence in Northwest Washington, Trachtenberg said he did not trust any of his underlings to select destitute workers.

"Besides, everyone around here talks too damn much," he explained. "The last thing this joint needs is any more bad press. So I made a little exception to my rule against those hot Third World countries."

Because Velasquez did not speak a word of English, Trachtenberg says he was forced to explain the terms of her contract in sign language.

"I did not really understand what he meant," Velasquez says. "I thought he told me that if I came to the North I would live in a house made of gold and have people come to wash my hair."

Not quite. But Velasquez has done well for herself since Trachtenberg smuggled her into the States in the belly of his private jet.

Trachtenberg put her right to work in the J Street kitchens. Velasquez gets hot after 14-hour shifts among the ovens and dishwashers, she says.

"But next year, when I look a little older, they said I can work in the front, where the students can see me," she exclaims. "That will be good."

Trachtenberg, listening to his protégé, laughs. "That's right, Mariana," he pats her hand. "No need to raise any alarm among those politically correct labor folks."

Velasquez looks puzzled. "What?"

"Nothing," Trachtenberg replies.

When Velasquez is promoted next year, her salary will go up 25 cents an hour.

"I will be making $1.75 then for every hour of work," Velasquez announces proudly.

"Oh," Trachtenberg interjects. "I thought you only made $1.00 now."

"No," Velasquez tells him. "That man - what's his name - Chairnack. He raised it last year."

"We'll see about that," Trachtenberg mutters. "You see what I deal with? How am I supposed to run a corporation with all these big spenders throwing money around like it grows on trees? What will I do when Marion Barry gets here?"

Velasquez, meanwhile, is pulling a sweater over her shoulders. She has to get back to the parking garage basement. The four cement rooms she shares with the other 200 illegal immigrants will soon be locked down for the night.

Those who miss curfew must sleep on the streets, she explains. If the police question them, they are to deny any knowledge of George Washington University.

Kandy Hertzblaum

Kappa Smacka Slut president gets profound

Running around organizing her sorority isn't easy on senior Kandy Hertzblaum. Especially in three-inch heels.

But Hertzblaum braves blisters and bad hair days. As president and founder of Kappa Smacka Slut, she can barely catch her breath, let alone take a day off (even when D.C.'s intense humidity threatens to frizz her mane).

"As the president, I have to set a good example, and a lot of the like you know, um, organizational, um, responsibilities are like my problem," Hertzblaum explains. "With so many, you know, a lot of these girls, they depend on me. Without KSS, they can hardly keep themselves in classes. Their minds are like elsewhere."

Hertzblaum founded KSS during her freshman year. Emerging from the affluent jungles of Long Island, she recalls the shock she experienced living in Thurston Hall.

"First of all, like there were girls on my hall, all right, who would go out in - I mean it was ridiculous," Hertzblaum recalls. "I mean white after Labor Day, like they would go to classes with these baseball hats and I swear they didn't even like shower half the time."

Besides the fashion problems in Thurston, Hertzblaum said she was also distressed by the cultural deficiencies of her fellow students.

"They were like total rubes or something," she shudders. "I was like, 'hello, have you ever heard of Tiffany's?' and they'd be all 'huh?'"

Worst of all, Hertzblaum said, was her roommate.

"She was from like Idaho or Ohio - one of those places," she recalls. "And she like had this nosering and she used to like go out with guys that I mean she could never marry or anything - sometimes they weren't even like white."

Hertzblaum needed to find her niche, she says. After a few hysterical phone calls to Mom and Dad, Hertzblaum convinced her parents to contribute to the cause of preserving their daughter's social life.

"I mean, personally you know I don't have any money of my own," Hertzblaum said. "But my parents understand like how important it is for me to be seen with the right people. How else can I go out and seriously expect to meet the kind of man I could bring home? So like with that in mind they funded the sorority. My mom's like an honorary member or something."

Ironically, Hertzblaum said men are the base for the sisterhood she founded. KSS does mixers with fraternities and athletic teams.

"Of course, that's to make sure that we are consistently meeting the men who are going someplace with their lives," Hertzblaum explained. "I don't need the degree - I need the ring. That's what I tell my girls."

Hanging out with other Jewish girls from the northeast corner of the country also increases visibility, Hertzblaum said.

"This way, say you're like a Jewish guy, pre-med or maybe pre-law," she explained. "You know exactly where you can find the girls to match your position. Kappa Smacka Slut has members from the tri-state area, as well Connecticut, Massachusetts and one girl from Maryland. But all of us favor Wonderbras, brown lipsticks and lots of black. I mean except when we work out."

East Coast/ West Coast rivalries tear-up team, music groups

by Clearly Buggin'-out

GWobe Flip-Flop Correspondent

An East Coast/West Coast rivalry has plagued the GW men's basketball team all year and now threatens to tear apart its newly-formed rap groups.

The Colonials have started three different music groups since basketball season ended.

"At first we were all gonna just be in the same group and put all our differences aside for the sake of rap," said junior point guard Nutty Bone and member of You Rang, Man?. "But those motha-fuckas from the West Coast suck. We kicked them out and then we sent those fuckers from Belarus packin' cause they don't know shit about hip-hop."

"Fuck that fake ass bitch, he thinks cause he's from Balt'more that he's keepin it real - but I'm from Cali and I'm the one who's truly representin'," said senior point guard Hazzard, or the HZA, the newest member of the Death Row family.

"But I do agree with Nutty Bone when it comes to those damn Bela(Pizza)Russians," said the HZA.

The white boys have formed their own group that they say is a cross between American R&B like Boyz2Men and crappy Euro Trash.

"We were going to be called Koul and the Gang," said junior Yo Girls Myshitisoff. "But then someone told us that name was already taken."

They named their group Az If.

West Coast rapper X-tra Disturbed, a freshman forward, joined the HZA in his group, Commuted to Life, a slightly less violent creation from the gangstas of Death Row.

"I'm from the West Coast of Europe, so I guess that counts," said X-tra Disturbed. "We let Narc Blunt join, too, since he's technically from the West Coast - even though he's a white boy from Alaska."

Former Colonial and recent NBA player Notorious D.U.D. has also joined You Rang?

"He called one day while I was watching Springer," said freshman forward Big Daddy King. "He was crying and I just wanted him to shut the fuck up cause I was watching this pregnant ho get beat with a chair by her boyfriend's other ho. D.U.D. was saying something about not having a job anymore so I said he could join. I hope he rhymes better than he plays ball."

You Rang? already has their first gig booked for next week in Chicago.

"When the Jenny Jones Show called, that was the best day of my life," said senior Dareman of North Carolina. "We're going to be the musical entertainment during a show called 'You Stupid Bitch, You're Fucking Your Cousin! So Now It's Time for a Make-over!'"

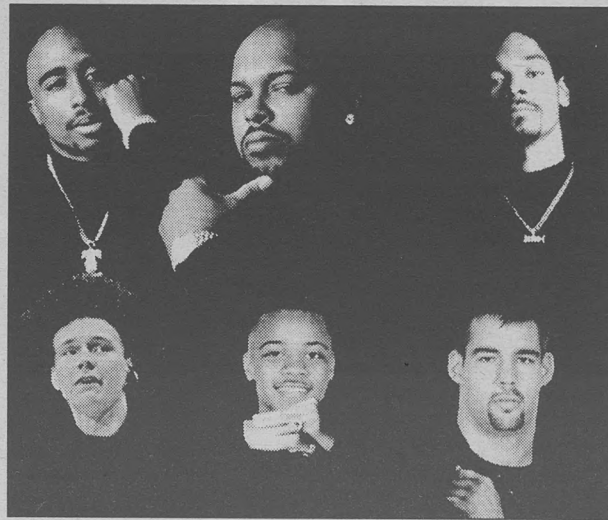

You Rang? has been rehearsing all week for the show. They'll perform a song called "In da Dawg House" in which Dareman and Montreal native LLCoolJ(J) are the main rappers.

"We been there so we knows all bout it, yo," said LLCoolJ(J).

The group is not sure if Pack the Bong will perform in Chicago.

"He's like our very own Ol' Dirty Bastard," said Dr. Trey. "Sometimes he shows and sometimes he doesn't, but wherever he is, you know he's always fucked-up on somethin. In the words of Puba, he's looser than a crackhead's hairweave."

Commuted to Life has also released their first single called "I Wonder If Heaven Got a Guthrie Hall?"

Narc Blunt, Hazzard (the HZA) and X-tra Disturbed represent the West Coast in their group, Commuted to Life, a subsidiary of Death Row Records.

Babyface Killah, Singin' Fool and Yo Girls Myshitisoff are the Euro Trash Belarussian hit Az If. "We're like Boyz2Men meets Take That," said Fool. They're first single is called "Let Me Rub You Up and Down (With My Vodka Bottle)."

The East Coast rap sensation, You Rang, Man? consists of (clockwise) Damn I Am da Man, Dareman, the Notorious D.U.D., Dr. Trey, Big Daddy King, LLCoolJ(J), Nutty Bone and Pack da Bong. They're sporting matching leather outfits and golden-colored skullies.

'Q' forced work study to shave his hairy neck

by Cheese Berger

Meets Brother at Friday's

Student Manipulation President Komingupand 'Q' Gulpdown forced a work study student to shave his neck, according to secretly-recorded audio tapes obtained by The GWobe.

In the tapes, work study Moaning Loudly describes the strange relationship she had with Gulpdown.

"He led me into his office and said he needed my help with something. We walked in and he took a razor out of his pocket and smiled. He said, 'You know you want to!'" Loudly said in the tapes.

The tapes go on to give specific detail of her "first time."

"He unbuttoned his shirt. He grabbed my hand and put it on his neck. It felt weird," she said. "We began going up and down with the shaving cream. We started slow and got faster. Soon cream was everywhere."

Loudly says on the tape she was proud to do her part for her University, and that she would never tell of their relationship.

"If anyone asks, I'll just lie," she said. "Who would believe it anyway?"

Gulpdown denied the charges. "I use Nair," he said.

Loudly says on the tapes that she is obsessed with Gulpdown, and has kept a dress stained with his shaving cream.

The account was taped by Rat-trick McAnus, a former presidential candidate. McAnus befriended Loudly but began taping the conversations when she started describing the neck-shaving activity.

Loudly has been hiding from the media inside the Safeway at the Watergate. She was recently promoted to vice president for presidential maintenance.

Her lawyer, Billy Gimmemoney, is hiding inside Rice Hall, pretending to be president of GW.

McAnus gave the tapes to The GWobe during the S&M presidential runoffs, in an attempt to win votes and not lose pathetically. The plan backfired.

"Who knew so many people hated me and would vote for Carrying Pot," he said.

McAnus said he sympathized with Gulpdown.

"I too have a hair problem," he said. "I have been having Gulpdown's neck hair surgically implanted in places where I lack hair."

In an exclusive interview with McAnus' girlfriend, Ed Bradley asked her where the hair has been placed.

"Down there," she said hesitantly. McAnus was unavailable for further comment because he was being attacked by a group of baseball players.

With the latest developments, University Vice President for Watching Sports Robert Checkinass asked for Gulpdown's resignation.

"His actions were inappropriate," he said. "Besides, he has never kissed my ass enough to be a good president."

S&M EVP Lonely N. Saggy also asked for Gulpdown's resignation.

"His actions were inappropriate," he said. "Besides, he has never kissed Checkinass' ass enough to be a good president."

Both Checkinass and Saggy said the respect students have for the S&M could be jeopardized by the allegations. However, both were unable to name a student who actually has respect for the S&M. In fact, the interviews with Checkinass and Saggy were exactly the same, except for a moment when Saggy lost his earpiece.

"Oops!" he said.

S&M EVP-elect Takin' Surveys said the administration has been trying to place an earpiece in him since his victory, but he has escaped.

"I gave out 5,000 surveys about earpieces and got five back," he said. "The overwhelming majority wanted no earpieces on student leaders. So I wrote a memo."

Checkinass said Carrying Pot has been wearing the earpiece for a while, and has been using it to manipulate students through Colonial Inauguration.

"You didn't think students would say nice things about GW on their own, do you?" he said.

News Brief

GWhat a GWonderful GWorld GWhen GWorking

Tokay Liquors is the newest off-campus partner to join the GWorld card program, Program Manager Wesell Tires announced today.

"GWe are pleased that Tokay has agreed to join the program," Tires said. "They're a GWonderful establishment that really exists to serve students."

Tires said Tokay will be the first partner to use GW's new system for determining GWhether students have adequate funds to charge a meal to their debit accounts. The new system GWas created after glitches in the old system.

Under the new system, Tokay GWill require students GWho GWant to charge a purchase to the GWorld card to fill out a form in triplicate three days before they intend to make a purchase, GWhich GWill then be Federal Expressed to the GWorld card office.

GWorld staff members will review the requests, and send GWord back to Tokay about GWhich students have adequate funds in their accounts.

Students fear fatalities at Commencement

The GW Hatchet Commencement Survey

by Tooty Frooty Frappé

Asst. Popcorn Provider

Grassroots groups are uniting across campus to change the location of Commencement this May. Students are asking that graduation be held at the MCI Center as El Niño threatens to bring lightening storms, hurricanes and tornadoes to the East Coast in May.

Members of the Student Committee Against El Niño and Graduation on the Ellipse (SCAENGE) said the administration must cancel its plans for graduation on the Ellipse because they fear dying in El Niño-related natural disasters.

The current activism was spurred by news reports that California has been engulfed by the Pacific Ocean during a recent wave of storms. The weather front will hit the Washington, D.C. area by mid-May, according to the National Weather Service.

At a recent SA town hall meeting, students voiced their opinions to the administration and Board of Trustees members, who had to be kept awake by periodical lashes of whips by lame duck SA President Muyokar "Y" Gulpourfood.

"Students are scared of being exposed to violent weather conditions with nothing to shield them but their mortar board graduation caps," said Student Association Sen. Wanna-be-Maverick Macinforvotes. "My constituency has said it will run to mommies and daddies to complain."

"I paid good money to come to GW and I expect to live through my graduation," said Jason Waver, an SA senator representing the grotesquely overtan.

"The University would be going back on another promise by letting us die," said Justen Boyami-Annoying. "The University will hurt me again."

But GW President Stephen Jughead Tractorbuying said the University needs to look at the most cost-effective method of administering Commencement.

"We can not take back the deposit we put in for the Ellipse," he said. "Students had the chance to schedule Commencement at the MCI Center, but last semester they chose the Ellipse ... if the weather causes a few health hazards, the University can not be held accountable."

Lynn Shippinout, head of special events, said whatever students want the administration will settle on something else.

"Our ultimate goal here is to screw the students," Shippinout said. "Or maybe we'll just let Tractorbuying make the switch at the last minute so he looks like a hero."

Tractorberg renames buildings after him

by El Niño Hard-rain
Causing Hail in the Summer

Colonial Inauguration became a nightmare for a large class of incoming freshmen when University President Steven Jole Trachtenburgh initiated a campus building renaming spree and poisoned protesting parents, according to recently surfacing reports.

Parents wreaked havoc on stationary exercise bikes when Trachtenburgh announced his plan to rename the Smith Center the Trachtenburgh Complex.

As a protest to the name change, visiting parents refused to eat the shrimp cocktails served in J Street and proceeded to the Smith Center, ripping up checks that would have been their first tuition payments.

The parents then filled the fitness room to capacity and worked out for two hours, refusing to give up their bikes to the parents waiting outside.

Trachtenburgh ordered J Street workers to deliver filet mignon to the athletic center.

"I just can't stand to see food from the night before go to waste, just ask my wife," he said.

One parent, Jim Jonestown said, "Well, it was a nice gesture. He even offered free punch."

Every non-vegetarian parent died of food poisoning that night and Trachtenburgh renamed the Smith Center just before students returned to campus for the fall semester.

"They were none the wiser," Trachtenburgh said. "These CI kids don't remember silly names like Smith and the like."

After the parents were found dead on 23rd and G streets surrounded by J Street food containers, Unprofessional Puppet Dolls ruled out any foul play.

"Let's face it, J Street food is bad, and these parents had not built up a tolerance for this crap like students have," UPD officer Tony the Tiger said.

Trachtenburgh said he changed the name of the Smith Center because he wanted the new athletic facilities to honor everyone who has ever shared his last name.

He announced plans to name the New Hall after his brother and change J Street to "SJT Street."

By no longer using the name of Charles Smith for the athletic facilities, the school can have contact sports once again.

"Now we can play football," Trachtenburgh said. "And you thought we sucked in other sports."

The surviving heir to the Smith family said he will have to renounce all the family's financial support to the University.

"It's a tragic, tragic day when my family can't prevent a school from reaching it's full potential by denying it a football team," Charles Smith XII said.

Smith said the University owes him $40 million in donations. Trachtenburgh said he will be forced to sell Mount Vernon College to make up for the loss.

Trachtenburgh also said he was looking into getting Andre the Giant to coach a new wrestling team. When the president was informed that Andre was dead, Trachtenburgh replied, "Well, doesn't that suck."

Lies! Lies! Lies! MVC just a sham

by Women Only

MVC Freak

GW President Students Don't Mattermuch admitted yesterday that Mount Vernon College does not exist.

"I just felt the need to be in The Washington Post," Mattermuch said.

According to Mike Beardman, director of defending the president and bringing random events to campus, the University successfully manipulated the Post into thinking the women's campus existed.

"We didn't think you guys would believe us," Beardman said. "But you did."

In an effort to keep up the joke, a replica of a school was built and the University started bussing in students daily from the Roseanne Arnold School of Theater and Music to pretend to be MVC students. Also, all calls made to MVC students were actually routed to a room in Rice Hall.

"It was fun," Mattermuch said.

Beardman said the expenses for the joke neared $100 million and the University will be forced to close the Columbian School, J Street and Fungur Hall. He also said Commencement will be moved to the School Without Walls Auditorium.

"It was worth it," Mattermuch said. He also said he is leaving the University to be Secretary of Kissingass next week, so he won't have to deal with the repercussions.

Beardman said he will be sending campus media at least 20 of the same press release to ensure people hear about it.

Stooge Association President Kuteasa Gorilla said he was considering discussing the changes to the president, but decided against it.

"They wouldn't have listened to me anyway," Gorilla said. "They don't care about students."

Mattermuch confirmed students' input was not a deciding factor.

Grassroots moron Adam Greenwithenvy said he was considering having a sit-in at Fungur Hall to protest the changes.

"Students deserve classrooms," Greenwithenvy said.

Mattermuch said he was arranging a catered buffet dinner for the protesters.

The president also announced that the free tuition he had given students at Poor Junior High School was just a joke too.

"I'll be long gone before they get here," Mattermuch said. "I just wanted my name in the Post again."

Kids were seen crying throughout the school.

"Mattermuch is a bad man. This University has hurt me already. I should have listened to that freak Justeen when he said not to go to GW," seventh-grader Nosmo King said.

GW basketball: sex, drugs and rock 'n roll

by Schmave

The Choice of a New Generation

Editors' note: Since we are such poor journalists and too damn lazy to write an actual feature story, we have provided the word-for-word transcript of our interview with GW men's basketball player Pack the Bong, women's basketball player Chastity Myass and Sports Misinformation Director Backedup Bowels. Here is the interview in its entirety:

GWobe: Let's begin with men's basketball forward Pack the Bong. Can you respond to the reports that you were caught with more than a kilo of pot in northern Virginia last week?

Pack the Bong: What can I say, I'm an enterprising man. I mean, shit, someone has to supply this campus with weed. People have the wrong perception of me. Y'all think I'm all bashful. Fuck that. Where did that come from?

G: That's a lot of pot, aren't you worried you'll go to jail?

PB: Naaaa. Man, I'm a high roller. I'll beat the wrap.

G: Would you say you're GW's biggest supplier of pot?

PB: Well, there were a few competitors, but I got rid of them. The golf team members are surprisingly good hit men, those white boys can really fuck people up.

G: Who's your best customer?

PB: Definitely my teammate Francisco da Handsofstone. Ya know he's from Holland and all, so he really needs that shit. Why do you think he's been playing better lately? Man, that kid was one oakey stiff until I hooked him up with some good weed.

G: Do any other players buy from you?

PB: Sure, everyone does, it relaxes us before games. Do you really think we could miss that many open jumpers if we weren't all stoned? Only center Somany Fouls doesn't smoke up with us, he's just a little too stiff. The other Belarussians don't much either, they're more into Vodka shots before the game. Especially forward Yo Momjerksoff, that kid can really drink.

G: Coach Ike Jarofurine doesn't mind all this?

PB: No. He understands that when you recruit players from far away lands and different cultures, you have to be open-minded and realize that some people have different lifestyles.

G: We'd like to get Coach Jarofurine's reaction to these developments, but unfortunately he couldn't be with us. He went on a recruiting trip to Nepal, to find the one 6-10 foreign player who can't shoot who wasn't at GW yet. Instead we are joined by GW Sports Misinformation Director Backedup Bowels. Mr. Bowels, what's the University's position on all this substance abuse?

Backedup Bowels: I haven't got a clue, how the fuck should I know?

G: Well, are there any other developments with the men's team? What about the report that forward Yo Momjerksoff has joined Alcoholics Anonymous?

BB: Look, I don't know anything, they don't tell me anything. I'm outta here. I'm goin' to Leo's.

G: Well, we also have women's basketball player Chastity Myass with us. Chastity, is there any kind of substance abuse like this on the women's team?

Chastity Myass: Hell no. We don't touch that stuff.

G: So at least the women's team is on the straight and narrow, right?

CM: Well, not exactly. We're all kind of bad asses. That's why the refs call so many fouls on us. We have a rep. The refs were out to get us this year. Did you see some of those calls? We got screwed!

G: Why were the refs out to get you?

CM: It was a conspiracy, C-O-N-spiracy. It might also have had something to do with our warm-ups. You know the ones that read "Baddest Bitches in the Beltway."

G: Thank you all for joining us and saving us from writing a feature story.

Bear Huggan/don't fuck with me!

An obsession with "pleasures of the flesh" has corrupted GW's basketball culture, according to a GWobe roundtable discussion. The Belarussians on the team, including Yo Momjerksoff, have taken up heavy drinking.

Bald head or bowling ball? Jarofurine's shiny dome has been at the center of a lot of controversy lately.

Jarofurine's bald head attracts lots of attention at GW

by Dustin Hoffman

The Rain Man

GW men's basketball coach Ike Jarofurine has turned down head coaching offers from more than 200 Division I schools in order to pursue another job, president of the Hair Club for Men.

"I think my smooth, shiny dome is the kind of look the company wants to push," Jarofurine said while carefully polishing his head with a handkerchief. "My head is so beautiful!"

The current president of the company, Afro Sideburns, didn't seem too concerned about losing his job, though.

"Has he looked at himself in the mirror lately? Why the hell would the Hair Club want him? He is bald. B-A-L-D. As in no hair. None whatsoever. There's more hair on his butt, I bet," Sideburns said.

Jarofurine always has been a hot commodity on the coaching market, but this year the rumor mill reached an all-time high. Notre Dame University has been actively pursuing Jarofurine not for his talent as a coach, but for his look.

"The 'Golden Dome' wants the sharpest looking dome on the planet as its head basketball coach," Notre Dame Athletic Director I. M. Catholic said. "Anything less would be uncivilized."

ESPN also reported that the University of North Carolina offered Jarofurine its head coaching position after being embarrassed by the Running White Guys of the University of Utah in the Final Four Saturday.

"I don't understand," UNC head coach Bill Gutrot said. "I'm bald, too."

Aren't I beautiful?"

Despite all the offers and Jarofurine's wish to leave, GW still is interested in trying to retain Jarofurine, according to Athletic Director Jackoff Inmypyants.

"We would really miss his bald head around here," Inmypyants said. "We wouldn't miss him as a coach, but damn, I love looking at that smooth skull."

But Jarofurine said he is adamant about giving up his coaching career to earn the top spot at the Hair Club.

"Yelling at players who don't appreciate my lustrous cranium isn't fulfilling for me anymore," Jarofurine said. "All they want to do is unimportant stuff like practice and play basketball. I need feedback on how good I'm looking."

Many of the players have stated that Jarofurine's obsession with his bald head has had a negative effect on the team, and may have led to its first-round loss in the 1998 NCAA Tournament.

"He poured oil all over it his head for the game with the Cowgirls because he knew he would be on national television," point guard Shorten Raunchy said. "Whenever we looked at him on the bench, we got blinded for a few seconds." Center Atleastime Cool also felt Jarofurine's head is distracting, but for different reasons.

"I think it's sexy," Cool said. "I always find myself wanting to rub it."

Despite all the controversy it seems that Jarofurine's dream won't be realized according to the chairman of the Hair Club's board of directors, Ihava Toupee.

"We have a policy that our presidents must also be clients," Toupee said. "When you look at Jarofurine's bare scalp, it is pretty damn obvious he doesn't use our products."

Read the sports pages, or Dave and Dustin will beat you into a bloody pulp. What you don't think we'll do it?

Sports Tightly Whities

Golf team to "fuck up" Yale squad

Having discovered that the Yale University golf team was behind the theft of its clubs in November, the GW golf team vowed to get payback last week.

"Those motherfuckers stole our clubs when we were up in New Haven, so we're gonna fuck 'em up," said GW Coach Snotty Melon.

Melon did not indicate exactly how the Colonials would "fuck 'em up" and would not confirm that the team was behind several golf cart drive-by attempts on Yale golf team members.

"I have no comment on that," said Melon while smiling and polishing a Glock.

GW senior Luis Massiveslice said he was planning to use his clubs as weapons.

"I'm gonna bust heads," said the native of Somesunny Beach, Spain. "I can't get the ball on the fairway with my clubs, so why not use them as blunt weapons."

In a tournament in New Haven, Conn. in November, Colonial freshman Mike Gottagetsome and several other team members had their clubs stolen. Gottagetsome was forced to use Coach Melon's bigger sticks, resulting in Gottagetsome injuring his wrist. However, Gottagetsome admitted last week that his wrist injury really resulted from furious masturbating.

The New Haven police department could never solve the case, so the Colonials said they would take matters into their own hands.

"Those fat, donut-eating, no-case-solving pigs never even tried to find the culprits, so we're going to get justice Charles Bronson style," bitched GW junior Dan Painintheass.

Several Colonials said they had taken part in a golf cart drive-by attempt on Yale players. GW senior Hideonomo Wannabe, and twins Joe Canthitthegreen and Jim Cantgetitup all said they had been involved in drive-by attempts.

The PGA got involved when they heard that the team used a golf cart. "I don't know why they couldn't just walk-by" Un Thoughtful, President of the PGA said.

Crew team: buff chicks, blue dicks

GW crew team members were seen around campus wearing T-shirts reading "GW crew: buff chicks, blue dicks" Friday.

"That's our new motto," explained Coach Heavy Petting. "We wanted to show school spirit, so we put buff and blue on the shirts, but it also describes the team."

"It really does describe the team, we get out on the water early in the morning when its so cold and the guys, well, you know how it is," said team member Sam Shrinkage.

"It's very descriptive, we crew chicks are buff and bad asses. Don't fuck with me shorty, or I'll fuck you up right now," said team member Tara de Rowswithcrabs.

GW baseball team suffers huge loss to little leaguers

by Rubber Onthemound

Hot Dog Vendor

In what was supposed to be a break from a rigorous schedule in the first half of the season, the GW baseball team was beaten like a red-headed stepchild 69-0 in an exhibition game with the Dodgers, a little league team from Alexandria, Va.

GW head coach Dontdrinkthe Water thought the opposition wasn't quite playing by the rules when it beat his Colonials, though.

"Some of those kids had to be at least 13 or 14," Water said. "Twelve-year-olds just don't have those kinds of skills."

GW starting pitcher Adam Batsforbothteams was shelled by the Dodgers from the start, giving up 15 runs before he recorded an out.

"We've beaten some real power-houses this year, but they were all pee-wee league team," Batsforbothteams said. "I guess we weren't ready to make the transition to the next level of competition."

For the Dodgers, Stillwearin Diapers, who weighs 90 pounds and is 4-10, according to his mother, had a spectacular day. He shut out GW and hit just one batter, the only Colonial to reach base. Diapers also hit seven home runs and knocked in 20 of the Dodgers' 69 runs.

"He looked like Mike Piazza (of the Los Angeles Dodgers) must have looked when he was that young," Water said. "I want to try to get some of their kids on scholarship."
